

Arnold Schwarzenegger - Daily Mail Online A: You may try to get a str name with `sys.stdout.writelines` and then just print it. You can do it easily with Python REPL.

Please see Python REPL. Or just write your command to a file and use `print(open('test.txt','r').read())`. These methods will be good for when you want to print a result from a program and to not lose the state of the shell. Update: You must do following tasks: Open the connection to the server Open connection to the database Connect to the database Start SQL command Print SQL command output Close connection from database Close connection from server Close connection from shell So it will be like this: `conn_stat = pydataserver.connect(host=hostname, port=port, service='mssql_server')` `conn_conn = pydataserver.connect(host=hostname, port=port)` `conn_db = pydataserver.connect(host=hostname, port=port, service='mssql_database')` `print 'Connected to server'` `cmd = 'SELECT [MSSQL_DATABASE].[DATABASE_NAME] FROM [MSSQL_DATABASE].[sysdatabases]'` `cursor = conn_conn.cursor()` `cursor.execute(cmd)` `print 'cmd executed'` `result = cursor.fetchall()` `print "Results: "` `for row in result: print row[1]` `print 'Closed connection from database'` `conn_db.close()` `print 'Closed connection from server'` `conn_conn.close()` I think it would be perfect to have some controls like a dialog or something like that. In this case your solution must be modified a bit. Bye Q: Add a custom link at the bottom of a bootstrap grid column I have a bootstrap grid on a page with 3 columns. I need to have a link at the bottom of the third column as well as the surrounding area.
