DRM EXPERT is an iPhone software solution designed to protect personal computer data and content. We propose to investigate the nature and clinical and prognostic significance of cellular immune responses in patients with lupus nephritis. We will examine the characteristics of the circulating antibody responses to native and denatured glomerular antigens and the development of antibodies to determinants expressed by the glomerulus. We will examine the cellular immunity to the glomerular determinants by determining whether there is crossreactivity between anti-basement membrane autoantibodies and the glomerular antigens. We will further examine the nature and significance of the cellular immune response in patients with lupus nephritis using nephrectomy and kidney biopsy specimens.

Q: How to create one new PHP file with multiple echo Is it possible to get into PHP and use multiple echo on one single file? For example: `hello'; echo 'world'; ?>` Or do I have to use multiple files (or multiple.php)?

A: The first one is not PHP, it's HTML. `echo "hello"; echo "world";` Then you can use the include function to include another PHP file. `require_once('path/to/file.php');`

A: I suggest something like this: `index.php: hello'; echo 'world'; ?>`

A: The first one is not PHP. It is a H1 tag. You can either create a H1 tag, or use another tag like the p tag. You don't need to use two echo's. Try this. `hello'; echo 'world'; ?>` 't take them seriously. And if you weren't, you would be reading the next paragraph. There were two primary components of my approach that I found most effective:
