Charles Pratt (cricketer) Charles Pratt (29 August 1829 – 18 May 1905) was an English cricketer, who played first-class cricket from 1852 to 1858. He was born at Coombe, near Winchelsea, Kent, and was educated at Christ's Hospital, where he made his first-class debut in 1852, playing for Kent against Sussex. In the following year he played for Kent against the Marylebone Cricket Club and the M.C.C. at the Kennington Oval, and against Sussex at the same venue, followed by games against Surrey at the Oval in the 1853 season, and a game for Middlesex against Kent. Pratt was a member of two English cricket teams to tour the United States during the early 1850s, and in 1855, he played a single first-class match in Canada against a team representing the British provinces. In 1856, Pratt played in a single first-class match for the North in the North v South series against the South, and in 1858 he played three further first-class matches for Kent, all of which were in the County Championship, including a fixture against Cambridge
