xtube american pie song - J'adore xtube. A sense of hope: the meaning of hope for older patients facing life-limiting illness. Older adults face the prospect of potentially life-limiting illness, with strong forces to die and die well. As people approach the end of their lives, they report a strong desire to live with meaning and dignity, to feel that they have accomplished something meaningful with their lives, and to be able to make sense of suffering and death. They report an almost universal desire to have control over the end of their lives and the circumstances surrounding death and dying, and a need to feel that the end of their lives is the end of a story with a purpose. They want to be seen and heard and to pass peacefully and 'accepted'. As older adults approach end-of-life, they are confronted with conflicting messages about what to expect--is the future limited by illness and death, or do they have control over death and dying? They must find hope, and hope must be meaningful. The purpose of this chapter is to draw from our experience with people facing life-limiting illness and to make sense of the meaning of hope for older adults. We argue that in many respects, the meaning of hope is a function of the meaning and purpose that people bring to their existence in a sense that they are not simply a biological continuation of earlier life. An Alternative Love Song for the Season I have made it quite clear that I don't want to write a sequel to my post, Where Have All the Christmas Songs Gone? There's a reason for that: time. As we all know, time is a tricky thing. One minute you can look forward to a blazing-hot day, and the next minute the icy fingers of winter are nipping at your nose. (I wonder why that is. It might have something to do with our bodies being wrapped in clothes and not being active in our bodies. But there might be more to the seasonal change than that. Maybe we need to start paying more attention to nature's cycles, rather than living life on a rigid "pause button" schedule?) Well, I am of the firm belief that time is one of the most precious gifts we have, but I digress. I will start my year off with a short, sweet, alternative 0cc13bf012
