Art The Movie Pull function of a DVD (Digital Versatile Disc) includes the operation of reading out and playing back an audio-visual (AV) content recorded on a DVD. The Movie Pull function is a scheme of reading out the AV content from a DVD in order to play the AV content using the DVD player. Specifically, a DVD player reads out the AV content recorded on a DVD, and displays the contents (program data) of the read-out AV content on a display unit. In addition, the DVD player plays back the AV content using the AV playback device. Further, the DVD player prints a label on which the reading out result

Its features are very rich and will guide you through all the steps in easy.Q: Logstash gzip decoder I need to read a gzip compressed log file (with a file extension of.gz). When I use the following configuration, it works only for one iteration of the gzip field. It doesn't write to STDOUT. input { gzip { type => "testfile.gz" } } output { stdout { } } However, if I only change gzip to csv, it works as expected, writing to STDOUT. I'm new to Logstash, so there may be something obvious. A: The csv config is correct. The reason that it is not working for you is that the gzip plugin handles fields in-order.

That is, it passes through the first field in the payload only when it encounters the next header. So, without knowing more about your input stream, it appears that it's not sending any content at all. If you set grok to directly pipe to stdout and include a test file with 1,000,000 elements it will log them to stdout in one pass. So, there must be something in your pipeline that is handling the data.
